LAPADA ART & ANTIQUES FAIR CHARITY PARTY RAISES OVER £350,000 FOR NATIONAL OSTEOPOROSIS SOCIETY

The glamorous Break Free Party, which was hosted by the National Osteoporosis Society at the LAPADA Art & Antiques Fair, Berkeley Square, took place on Wednesday 24 September 2014.

Guests, including Culture Secretary Sajid Javid, Cath Kidston, Annabel Goldsmith and Craig Revel Horwood, enjoyed Champagne Lanson, Berkeley Square Gin, wines donated by the Marks Club and canapés before dinner. The sumptuous candle-lit surroundings were created by interior designer Kitty Arden alongside event co-chairs interior designer Annabel Elliot and Carlyn Chisholm, co-chair of Candidates Committee for the Conservative Party.

The party, kindly supported by main sponsor, specialist real estate investment, development and advisory company, Delancey with co-sponsors Law Family Charitable Foundation and the David Brownlow Charitable Foundation, offered guests the opportunity to participate in an auction of once-in-a-lifetime experiences, artworks and holidays. The evening's auctioneer, Henry Wyndham charmed guests into generous bids. A portrait session with artist Phoebe Dickenson was hotly bid for, eventually selling for £20,000, whilst dinner for six hosted by Dame Barbara Windsor went for £8,000.

The National Osteoporosis Society's Chief Executive Claire Severgnini said: "We are hugely grateful for everyone involved in making this night so successful and supporting our bold vision of a future without fractures caused by osteoporosis."

Funds raised will mean that thousands of people will continue to benefit from the vital work undertaken by the Charity, and enable it to pursue an ambitious programme to establish a Fracture Liaison Service linked to every UK hospital.

National Osteoporosis Society

Osteoporosis is the fragile bone disease that causes painful, debilitating and sometimes fatal fractures. More than 3 million people in the UK are affected by osteoporosis and each year 300,000 fractures occur, often from the most minor bump or fall, many of which could have been prevented with earlier diagnosis and treatment.

The National Osteoporosis Society is at the centre of the UK osteoporosis community, working with leading clinicians and experts to represent the authoritative voice and drive improvements in diagnosis, prevention and treatment. The charity provides vital information and support services to people with the condition and their families and carers.

The National Osteoporosis Society was established in 1986 and Her Royal Highness The Duchess of Cornwall is President. The need for the charity's work has never been greater: as the UK population ages and fracture rates continue to increase, it is clear that more people than ever are living with osteoporosis. The National Osteoporosis Society does not receive money from the government, so relies on support from the public to continue to make a difference. <http://www.nos.org.uk/>
